

Final Semester of Pathway: Are You Ready for the Next Step?

YOU ARE NOW IN YOUR THIRD and final semester of Pathway courses. If you have already chosen your next steps after completing Pathway, great job! You are well on your way to academic success. If you have not had the opportunity to begin exploring your options after Pathway, we encourage you to give it some sincere and prayerful thought. You have many different options to choose from once you successfully complete your Pathway experience.

You can apply to BYU-Idaho to become a degree-seeking (matriculated) student in the Online Degree Program or on campus in Rexburg (additional requirements apply). In order to continue your education at BYU-Idaho, you must complete an application through www.besmart.com. You may also choose to explore local options available to you that are close to home. Your Pathway missionaries are an excellent resource to assist you in these endeavors.

If you choose to matriculate into a BYU-Idaho program, we recommend that you begin this application process as soon as possible. Your part of the process takes some time to complete, and the finished application takes a few weeks to process as well. By starting soon, you should be able to have it completed in time to register for classes. To ensure the largest class selection, you will want to register at the earliest date possible. Also, keep in mind that you will need to receive an ecclesiastical endorsement to turn in your application. This must be completed through your bishop and then a member of the stake presidency.

Once you have completed your application and have been accepted into either an online or campus program, you will receive an official notification and instructions on accepting your offer.
